Do you dream of waking up each day in Italy? Of immersing yourself in another culture? Perhaps you’ve even considered moving or retiring abroad? Then this program is for you!

AHI’s three-week International Lifestyles Explorations program is not for the average tourist. This incomparable introduction to living abroad is designed for curious explorers who want to broaden their horizons and experience truly immersive living in a foreign country.

Travel experts have meticulously planned this pioneering program, which includes intensive language instruction, an educational lecture series and excursions to the picturesque Tuscan towns of Siena, Cortona and Lucca, as well as the Castello di Monsanto in Chianti and two of Florence’s prized museums, the Uffizi Gallery and the Accademia. Enjoy ample free time to explore your treasured new home, the birthplace of the Renaissance.

Both first-time students of Italian and those who simply want to refresh their skills will appreciate the language instruction provided by The Learning Center of Tuscany, where you will take classes four days a week with an instructor we call your Lifestyle Guide. This guide will help you take the language out of the classroom and into the streets of the city, exposing you to the cultural nuances of the locals and allowing you to exercise your newly acquired or enhanced practical language skills.

Unlike other, more rigid travel programs, you can tailor this experience to your desires. Explore the buzzing piazzas and rolling countryside at your own pace. Dine in restaurants that no tourist could hope to stumble upon. Buy your own groceries at an outdoor market. Take in a music or theater performance. Develop an enduring camaraderie with the locals and your fellow travelers. Our AHI Travel team will be available to help you in any way, but this life-changing journey is yours to mold.

experience daily life in Tuscany and become adept and comfortable in a different language and culture.

Tuscany

The fifth largest of Italy’s 20 regions, Tuscany is world-renowned for its gorgeous, hilly landscapes, centuries-old traditions and marked influence on European art and culture.

The region’s heritage stretches over almost three millennia. Tuscany was settled sometime after 1000 B.C. by the Etruscans, whose origins are unknown, though historians have pieced together the ancient civilization though found artifacts, mostly in tombs. The Etruscans were the first in Italy to organize their society within a political framework, and the reverberations of these early settlers have been felt throughout Tuscany’s political, cultural and religious history.

The Romans gained control over the region around 400 B.C., and except for the construction of public works like roads and aqueducts, Tuscany was little altered for centuries. The region awoke in the 12th century, when new towns and the rise of trade and industry brought fortune, political upheaval and a cultural Renaissance. After three tumultuous centuries of rule by the Medici family, Tuscany’s politics were overtaken by the Lorraine dynasty, who ushered in a period of prosperity and peace. After a brief stint as part of the French empire, during which Lucca was ruled by Napoleon Bonaparte’s sister, in 1860 Tuscany adhered to the Kingdom of Italy. It has since become a favorite destination of worldly travelers seeking fine culture, hearty cuisine, world-renowned wine and friendly conversation.

Florence

The capital city of Tuscany, Florence is a veritable open-air museum, an urban masterpiece spread over the banks of the River Arno. It is often named Italy’s most beautiful city thanks to an explosion of creative genius that spawned the Renaissance between the 14th and 16th centuries, leaving the city laden with a wealth of fine art and stunning architecture.

During your first full day in Florence, embark on a walking tour of your new home led by your AHI Travel Director. Learn the history of the emblematic Il Duomo, admire the cupola of the Basilica di Santa Maria del Fiore, visit the spectacular bronze doors of the Baptistery, stroll over the Arno on the fabled Ponte Vecchio and sip espresso at a café on the Piazza della Signoria. Florence’s timeless beauty awaits!

Did you know?

Dante’s “Divine Comedy,” an epic poem composed between 1308 and his death in 1321, was written not in Latin, as was traditional for literature at the time, but in the language spoken by Florentines. This helped establish their dialect as the basis for modern Italian.

STUDENT LIFE IN FLORENCE

Parli Italiano? This program includes 36 hours of Italian instruction at The Learning Center of Tuscany, a distinguished member of the Florence language education community. Opened in 2006, The Learning Center of Tuscany believes that language and culture are inseparable. Their language instruction, led by language specialists, university-level liberal arts instructors and art historians, is designed to go beyond the textbook and the classroom to foster cultural understanding through authentic experiences that impact individuals as students and as world citizens.

Held Monday through Thursday mornings, your 12 three-hour language classes are small and tailored to your skill level, guaranteeing individual attention and a comfortable progression through the lessons. You will complete a skills assessment before you arrive in Florence in addition to a placement test on the first day of class. Everyone from beginners to Italian majors will develop their skills and put them to use in the city with the help of your highly qualified Lifestyle Guide, a native Italian speaker.

ITALIAN MEALTIME

Italians typically begin their day with coffee, specifically espresso or cappuccino, and a cornetto or brioche — a jam-, custard- or chocolate-filled pastry.

Pranzo, lunch, may consist of a panini, a high-quality sandwich packed with fillings, or a tramezzini, the less expensive equivalent made with pre-made sliced white bread. Toste, toasted sandwiches, are also popular, especially filled with cheese or ham with tomato. Snacks include focacce, oven-baked pastries topped with cheese or tomato, or filled with spinach, fried offal or meat; arancini or suppli, deep-fried balls of rice with meat or butter and cheese; thin, flat pizza slices; and calzones, folded pizza with cheese, ham, tomato or other fillings. Gelato, Italian ice cream, is justifiably famous, and when it comes to finding the most delicious flavors and textures in town, your best bet is to step into the most crowded gelateria you can find.

Cena, dinner, is a multicourse affair, beginning with antipasti such as bruschetta, garlic bread topped with tomatoes and olive oil; caprese, tomato, basil and mozzarella salad; or antipasto misto, mixed cold meats and cheese. Il primo, the first course, consists of a soup, pasta, polenta or risotto dish. Il secondo, the second course, is carne, meat; pesce, fish; or crostacei, shellfish, usually served alone or with a wedge of lemon or tomato. Il contorni, vegetables, and insalata, salad, are ordered and served separately. The meal ends on a sweet note, with dolci, puddings, or frutta, fruit.

EXTRA CREDIT

Cooking class: Learn to create the sumptuous flavors of Tuscan cuisine, notable for its simple, wholesome ingredients and straightforward techniques, during a series of optional cooking classes. Try your hand at a variety of dishes, meant to be drizzled with local oil and served alongside delectable Tuscan wines, as you create lasting memories and foster your passion for Italian cooking.

Photography walk: Don’t depend on the souvenir stores — create your own postcards from Florence. On day eight, participate in an optional activity with a noted professional photographer. (Each Extra Credit option is available at an additional cost.)

Extracurricular Activities

To complement your studies and expand your understanding of Tuscan culture and history, AHI is offering several exclusive lectures that are included in the price of your program. Feed your hunger for knowledge as you join cultural experts for the following educational discussions, followed by related excursions:

- Contemporary Italy and Life in Florence
- Renaissance Art

THE TUSCAN PANTRY

Italian cuisine was born in Tuscany, at the court of the Medici, and boasts a dizzying array of simple, hearty, peasant-inspired dishes, many consisting of five or fewer ingredients.

In addition to daily-bought meats and seasonal vegetables, a typical Tuscan pantry depends on olive oil, tomatoes and cheese — namely mozzarella, ricotta, provolone, pecorino Romano and Parmigiano-Reggiano, which must be produced in a limited area surrounding Parma to be labeled as such. Other basic items include balsamic vinegar, onions, garlic, legumes, cornmeal, rice, dried porcini mushrooms, olives, anchovies and capers. Essential herbs and seasonings include oregano, rosemary, thyme, sage, red pepper flakes, black pepper and sea salt.

Flour is always on hand to make fresh pasta, bread, pizza dough and cakes.

Tuscans, and Florentines in particular, are enthusiastic meat-eaters, feasting on locally raised beef, pork and game. Traditionally they utilize the entire animal, so foods like tripe and lamprèotto, made of animal stomachs, are sold from food carts throughout the cities.

A more universally appreciated dish is bistecca alla fiorentina, a thick T-bone steak grilled over charcoal and sprinkled with freshly ground black pepper and olive oil. The regional cuisine’s peasant origins are evident in ribollita, meaning “reboiled,” a vegetable soup that is reheated for several meals and thickened with bread. Panzanella, a bread and tomato salad, is another tasty but uncomplicated dish.

In addition to immersing you in three full weeks of authentic Italian food, this program includes a special cooking demonstration and tasting, and optional cooking classes are available at an additional cost. What better souvenir from your time in Tuscany than a repertoire of delicious Tuscan recipes?

THE TUSCAN WINE CELLAR

Wine is central to Tuscany’s economy and way of life. The region’s hilly soil and hospitable weather conditions are perfect for growing grapes. In fact, Etruscan paintings and pottery suggest that these original settlers were the first to domesticate the grape vines growing wild across the sunny, rolling hills, and references to the high quality of Tuscan wines date from Greek writers of the third century B.C.

Tuscan wines are largely based on the red Sangiovese grape, which forms the foundation of the region’s three most famous varieties: Chianti, Brunello di Montalcino and Vino Nobile di Montepulciano. Indeed, the majority of Tuscan wines are red, but white wines have been gaining ground thanks to the popularity of varieties like Vernaccia di San Gimignano. More than 30 Tuscan wines are labeled DOC, which certifies geographic origin, and six Tuscan wines are recognized as DOCG, the highest classification of Italian wines. Numerous others are labeled VTD, table wine, or IGT, table wine from a typical geographic area.

Chianti became the world’s first officially defined wine-producing area in 1716, when Cosimo III de’ Medici drew the boundaries defining which vineyards could use the Chianti name on their product. Today the area is divided into seven regions that produce reds ranging from light and swillable to deep-toned masterpieces. The best Chiantis mature in four to seven years, though the vintages produced from 1994 through 1997 are notably excellent.

Vin Santo is a Tuscan dessert wine that is popular throughout Italy. Unlike many dessert wines, Vin Santo’s characteristics vary greatly depending on the grapes used, and it can be either sweet or dry, though it is most often made from Trebbiano grapes, which account for a third of all white wine in Italy and are also the base for traditional balsamic vinegar.

CHIANTI AND SAN GIMIGNANO

Stretched between Florence and Siena and home to Italy’s most famous red wine, Chianti is a dreamy panorama of quiet back roads, lovely hillside towns, hundreds of acres of woodland and of course many a vineyard. Travel to its heart to visit Castello di Monsanto, owned by the Bianchi family and keeper of the largest reserve of Chianti Classico in Tuscany. Taste wines made from hand-picked Sangiovese, Canaiolo and other grapes, as well as olive oil from the estate’s 37 acres of olive groves. Afterward, enjoy lunch in the historic hilltop town of San Gimignano, which boasts 14 medieval tower-houses and a wealth of original squares, palaces and fountains.

SIENA AND COLLE DI VAL D’ELSA

Like a crown atop three clay hills, Siena is a labyrinth of majestic Gothic architecture, remarkably unchanged since the Middle Ages. In the 13th and 14th centuries, Siena was a major European city center and controlled most of southern Tuscany. Anchoring the cityscape is the scallop-shaped Piazza del Campo, one of Italy’s most beautiful squares. See the masterful bas-reliefs on the Gaia fountain, visit the dramatic, black-and-gold-striped cathedral and wander through narrow streets to discover alluring museums and well-preserved buildings, all encircled by ramparts that date from the 14th to 16th centuries. Afterward, continue to Colle di Val D’Elsa, a medieval commune known worldwide for its exquisite crystal glassware and art.

CORTONA

Clinging to a hill clad with olive groves, Cortona is well situated to enjoy sweeping views of the Val di Chiana. Ancient gates open out of the city’s walls, some of which were built during the time of the Etruscans. Enjoy a walking tour of this Tuscan gem, whose layers of history are revealed through its mixture of architectural periods and styles. Enter the stunning Romanesque cathedral, and visit the renowned Diocesan Museum to view its extraordinary collection of paintings from the medieval Sienese school, including Beato Angelico’s “The Annunciation.” Eat lunch at famed Ristorante Tonino, which offers breathtaking views of Tuscany’s rolling hills. Then continue to a local winery and an olive farm for tours and tastings.

LUCCA AND MONTECARLO

Fronted by gardens and huge bastions, Lucca is a venerable time capsule of urban Tuscan architecture. Founded by the Etruscans, then colonized by the Romans in the second century B.C., the town retains the street plan of a Roman military camp, with two perpendicular streets forming the central axis. Walk along the tree-lined public promenade, built atop the town walls in 1830, and admire the city’s complex web of densely packed houses, towers and churches, most of them erected during the city’s heyday between the 11th and 14th centuries. In the afternoon, depart for Montecarlo, built in 1333 to bring together the refugees of the borough of Vivinaia. Visit the Collegiata di Sant’Andrea, a church displaying a number of religious and artistic relics.
MASTERS OF THE RENAISSANCE

For Florentines, art is not mere decoration. The city’s streets and piazzas, paintings and sculptures, churches and palaces reflect a singular civic identity, as the great masters of the Renaissance wove their realistic, linear perspective and classical influences into the very fabric of the city.

Florence’s reputation as the birthplace of the Renaissance can be taken quite literally, as an astounding number of great men were born in Tuscany in the 13th and 14th centuries. Early luminaries like the painter Giotto di Bondone and the poet Dante Alighieri were followed by the prolific work of literary masters Francesco Petrarch and Giovanni Boccaccio and the architecture of Lorenzo Ghiberti, who designed the bronze doors of the Florence Baptistery, and Filippo Brunelleschi, who engineered the dome of the Basilica di Santa Maria del Fiore.

At the time, money and art went hand in hand. Artists made a living through commissioned works, so the rise of Florence’s mercantile and banking classes set the stage for a uniquely large community of benefactors, particularly on the part of the Medici family. Florence reached a new level of artistic abundance in the 15th century under the patronage of Lorenzo the Magnificent, a Medici and an artist himself who helped foster the careers of Leonardo da Vinci, Michelangelo Buonarroti and Sandro Botticelli, among many others.

On day six of your trip, participate in an informative lecture on Renaissance Art and then visit the Uffizi Gallery, which houses one of the most illuminating art collections in the world. Trace the development of Florentine art from the formal Gothic era of the 13th and 14th centuries, to the realism of the early Renaissance in the 15th century, to the High Renaissance and Mannerist periods of the 16th century. Florence is more than a setting for art — it is art itself.

“It had long since come to my attention that people of accomplishment rarely sat back and let things happen to them. They went out and happened to things.”

— Leonardo da Vinci (1452-1519), Italian Renaissance painter and inventor

“Where you are is who you are. The further inside you the place moves, the more your identity is intertwined with it. Never casual, the choice of place is the choice of something you crave.”
– Frances Mayes (b. 1940), American memoirist, “Under the Tuscan Sun,” 1996

“There is no such thing as justly describing the fine things that we have seen [in Florence] today...Art has here brought fiction so near upon the verge of reality, that the line between them is too nice to be drawn by words.”
– J.P. Cobbett (1803-1881), British writer, “Journal of a Tour in Italy,” 1830

“[Florence is a] City so beautiful that the great Emperor Charles V. said, That she was fitting to be shown and seen only upon Holidays.”
– James Howell (1594-1666), Anglo-Welsh historian and writer, Letter, 1621
